FDR CALLS FOR 125,000 PLANES IN WAR PLANS

Promises Victory In Annual Address To Congress on State of Nation.

REVEALS SACRIFICES

Grimly Worded Message Says Cost of Program Will Be 56 Billions This Year.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt promised congress and the nation today that the war would end in victory and outlined a tremendous production plan embracing an output of 125,000 planes, 75,000 tanks, 35,000 anti-aircraft guns, and 10,000,000 tons of shipping in 1943.

For this year—1942—he declared that "we shall produce 60,000 planes, 10,000 more than the goal set a year and a half ago," 45,000 tanks, 20,000 anti-aircraft guns and 8,000,000 dead-weight tons of merchant vessels.

In a grimly worded message delivered in person to a joint session of the senate and house, the chief executive declared that the task was hard and unprecedented—and the time short.

He spoke of sacrifices to come and said that it would appear in his budget message tomorrow that "our war program for the coming fiscal year will cost fifty-six billion dollars or, in other words more than one-half of the estimated annual national income," he added.

"This means taxes and bonds and bonds and taxes," Mr. Roosevelt asserted. "It means cutting luxuries and other non-essentials. In a word, it means an 'all-out' war by individual effort and family effort in a united country."

The chief executive mentioned American reverses at the outset of the conflict, but he declared that "powerful and offensive actions must and will be taken in proper time."

The consolidation of the united nation's total war effort against our common enemies is being achieved, the president said.

That was the purpose, he explained, of conferences which have been held during the past two weeks here, in Moscow and in Chungking and was the primary objective of the declaration of solidarity signed in Washington at the start of the New Year

As Camera Covered Festivities at Grid Banquet

Majorettes strutted, coaches spoke, football players ate without regard for training rules, and the band played on last night at The News-Journal's seventh annual football banquet honoring the undefeated Mansfield high Tygers, at the Mansfield-Leland hotel, attended by 325 fans, players and coaches. Majorette Etabel Hunter, who was queen for the home-coming game with Canton McKinley last fall, does a bit of high stepping and queenly smiling in the No. 1 picture above. Number 2 is Coach Paul Brown of Ohio State, urging the Tyger gridders to continue their education until the time they may be called for military duty. Number 3 shows Brown being greeted by another successful coach named "Paul"—Paul Snyder of the Tygers. In the No. 4 group, reading left to right, are Brown, Coach Bud Houghton of Massillon high school, Johnny Hallabrin, Mansfield's Ohio State quarterback, and Snyder. Part of the football team got in the action shot No. 5. Few of them had time to look at the camera. And the No. 6 picture shows part of the high school band, with J. Merton Holcombe directing, as they furnished the dinner music.

Grid Banquet Called Best In Its Seven-Year History

By REX HESS
(News-Journal Sports Editor)

"Finest football banquet The News-Journal ever put on."

That's what everybody said who attended last night's seventh annual N-J gridiron dinner at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

"Greatest football team in Mansfield high school's history."

That's what the speakers said, and everyone agreed.

The dinner and the program provided a fitting tribute to the undefeated Tygers of Mansfield high school, and an entertaining evening for the 325 fans, coaches and players who attended the event.

And just to keep in line with the "finest" and the "greatest" adjectives already applied to the banquet and the team, the attendance was the largest by far in the seven-year history of The News-Journal's annual tribute to the high school's footballers.

Major share of the credit for the success of the evening's program goes to J. Gilbert Baird, manager of the sales promotion department of the Mansfield Westinghouse plant and toastmaster for the occasion.

Baird kept things moving in a hilarious and rapid-fire manner that left no room nor time for boredom. Nothing occurred during the entire evening to slow up the proceedings, from the time the high school band, under the direction of J. Merton Holcombe began playing for the dinner on the dot of 6:30, until the last reel of football film was shown at 10:55 p. m.

Highlight of the evening, of course, was the talk by Coach

FUND GROWING

Red Cross Within $6,731 of War Emergency Quota.

The war emergency fund of Richland county chapter of the Red Cross was within $6,731 of its $30,000 goal today as $1,500 more filtered into fund headquarters in the Farmers bank building.

Promise of the Westinghouse to match dollar for dollar every contribution made by its employes up to an aggregate sum of $3,000, indicated that the gift of this industry and its employes would substantially increase the fund, W. J. Spreng, Red Cross campaign chairman, said today.

Contributions received yesterday included $200 from the Italian lodge, Loggia Principe Umberto No. 123, and $100 from the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America, Westinghouse Local 711.

PHILADELPHIA PAPER FOLDS

Evening Public Ledger Suspends After 27 Years Existence.

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — Despite a desperate last-minute fight by the publishers and its employes, the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger suspended publication today under court order after 27 years of existence.

Finis was written to the Ledger's publication when a three-judge federal court reluctantly rejected as "not feasible" a proposal whereby 715 of the 828 employes would have operated the newspaper themselves for another week without pay.

Suspension came after two months of effort to find either a purchaser for the financially ailing paper, or new capital to continue operation.

Officials Start Drafting New Appropriations For 1942 Operations.

Mansfield and Richland county employes were working speedily today to complete the necessary tabulations for appropriations bills for 1942. Both units reported the measures would be available within the next few days.

Although city officials would not draw any comparison between 1942 appropriations and those for 1941, County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe estimated that the county's 1942 appropriations would be no higher than 1941's when $671,739 was set aside for conty use.

Totals have not yet been made by the city workers but the preliminary budget adopted earlier calls for the expenditure of $344,-

UP TO BIDDLE

Attorney General Has Final Word on Harry Bridges.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Final action on deportation proceedings instituted against Harry Bridges CIO leader, on charges of membership in the Communist party rested today with Attorney General Francis Biddle.

Biddle is studying a report of the U. S. immigration appeals board, which yesterday unanimously recommended reversal of a deportation order issued Sept. 26, 1941 by Judge Charles B. Sears, Buffalo, N. Y., presiding inspector of the immigration and naturalization service.

Two courses appeared open for Biddle:—1. Acceptance of the boards reversal action which would quash all charges pending against Bridges. 2. Rejection of the board's recommendations which would make effective Sears' ouster order.

Resident Asks Town Near Boston Be Declared 'Open City.'

SAUGUS, Mass. — (AP) — This town's civilian defense committee has received an urgent plea from an excited woman that Saugus be declared an "open city."

Mercury Dives To 5 Below; Flames Damage Two Homes

Bitter cold gripped the Richland county area today along with the rest of the state as the mercury skidded to five degrees below zero — the lowest recorded this winter.

The weatherman said it would be fair today with slowly rising temperatures, but he would not guess how far the thermometer would rise. At noon the mercury stood at eight degrees above.

The sub-zero temperatures was blamed for three fires, two in the county and one in the city last night and this morning.

A 10-room house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. William Anliker at Adario, burned to the ground late yesterday, and a garage at the Snyder Funeral home in Lexington was leveled by flames early today. Mansfield firemen extinguished a chimney fire at the home of Richard Jorub, 510 Daisy street, yesterday afternoon. They reported that the fire was caused by an overheated furnace.

While Mansfield was one of the coldest spots in the state, several nearby cities last night recorded lower temperatures. At Bucyrus the mercury dropped to eight below. Cambridge had an unofficial low of 13 below and Designer Says War Will Hit Double-Breasted Suits.

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— The American male in a few months will be wearing a two-button, single-breasted suit, without cuffs on the trousers, Irvin Bender, of Baltimore, vice president of the International Association of Clothing Designers, predicted today.

"It's our patriotic duty to conserve cloth," Bender added, "an extra pair of pants to a suit is a luxury. Vests should be omitted. Let the women knit sweaters for the men."

The designers are holding their annual convention at Philadelphia.

Mayor's Silence Gives City Hall A Bad Case Of Jitters

By WILLIAM F. MURRAY

Whispered conferences, conversations broken off abruptly, furtive glances—all these are just a part of the ordinary day in the life of a Mansfield municipal employe these days.

Sudden entrances into rooms are frowned upon because they are likely to throw the room's occupants into a panic.

What is this "war of nerves" which keeps practically everyone in the municipal building so jittery?

It's been that way since the first of the year—the usual time for announcing the appointment or reappointment of city employes.

"Why doesn't he say something? What's going on? I wonder what is being planned?" These are just a few of the questioning remarks heard by city workers in a typical day at the office since the first of the year.

The "he" is Mayor W. J. Locke who has maintained his silence on the appointment of the heads of city departments such as the sewer, water, streets and several other divisions of the city administration.

Mayor Locke, himself, will volunteer no light on the situation. He has maintained silence on appointments and probably intends to continue to do so until after he sees how his new city council behaves.

The "worried ones" are not just the employes in minor jobs. Most of them are protected by civil service regulations. But the department heads, the men who boss the various divisions, know the full meaning of "uneasy lies the head that wears the crown," even though it might be a small crown.

Keep Aliens Under Surveillance As Deadline Passes

Several hundred German and Italian aliens living in Mansfield and Richland county were under police surveillance today.

With little more than 50 making reports of owning short-wave radios, guns, explosives or cameras before the deadline yesterday at 11 p. m., many of these aliens have made themselves liable to arrest and possible internment, Police Chief Meade K. Bates said.

The chief reported that 44 aliens had contacted his office to hand in the restricted articles, most of them coming in a rush last night between 7 and 9 p. m.

The 44 aliens handed in 24 guns 20 cameras, 33 certificates stating that their short-wave radios had been made inoperative, and two short-wave radio sets.

Sheriff Frank Robinson said he received only eight of the restricted articles before the deadline, getting only four guns, one cam-

Allied Forces Mass Defenses For Onslaught

Newly-Arrived U. S. Bombers Strike At Jap Landing Forces Off Mindanao; Land Fighting Continues.

(By Associated Press)

The Japanese threat against Singapore increased today.

Massing Allied fighting power for a last ditch defense of the great British naval base, Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell made the most of limited defense forces and newly arrived American heavy bombers.

On the air front, the American bombers struck at Japanese landing forces off the Philippine island of Mindanao, sinking a destroyer, blasting a battleship and probably damaging other vessels, while on Luzon island the land fighting went on doggedly in the hills of Batan province and on the repeatedly bombed island fortress of Corregidor.

In Malaya, the Japanese made new landing attempts on the west coast, presumably in an effort to support their drive on the important rubber and railroad center of Kuala Lumpur, but Singapore dispatches said all of the attackers were annihilated.

Other new landing attempts apparently were in progress on the west coast, with the outcome uncertain.

The gravity of the threat to Singapore was emphasized by a British withdrawal from the Perak front, where fighting had been in progress in the Kuala Selangor sector, on the west coast. The new positions in defense of Kuala Lumpur were not definitely indicated but presumably were some miles north of that point, or around 200 miles from Singapore. Kuala Lumpur is of vital importance in control of central Malay.

On the east coast, the British gave up the important airdrome of Kuantan, which is 200 miles from Singapore, creating the threat that strong Japanese fighter squadrons might be based there to protect bombers raiding Singapore. The naval base had another air attack last night but little damage was reported.

Wavell, now in supreme command in the southwest Pacific, was believed to have moved his headquarters to the Dutch East Indies and to be preparing for a counter-attack from Burma against the Japanese lines in Thailand in an effort to sap the strength of the enemy offensive toward Singapore.

Chinese, Indian and other troops have been massed in Burma for such an attack and considerable American and British air strength is available. The Japanese continued air raids on Rangoon in an effort to break up the Allied supply line centered there but met

ELATED: Capital Cheered By Air Blows Against Japs

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—At least seven enemy planes were hit by terrific anti-aircraft fire from the fortifications of Manila bay during a four hour air attack, the war department reported today. The fortress of Corregidor island and the forces of General Douglas MacArthur were attacked by 50 planes yesterday the department said, but material damage and casualties to the defenders were called light.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The hard hitting reappearance of U. S. bombers over the South Pacific gave the capital double grounds for elation today—a fresh blow had been dealt units of the Japanese fleet, and it offered evidence that American aerial reinforcements were arriving in the Far East.

There was a definite feeling that the United Nations soon would be in a position to give a better account of themselves in the sky fighting. This expectation was encouraged by London reports from Burma crediting the American volunteer corps there with a two-day bag of 66 enemy planes at the cost of four of their own.

For results the No. 1 exploit reported in the final U. S. communiques yesterday was the work of the army bomber flight which blasted an enemy destroyer to the bottom of Davao bay in the Philippines and scored three direct hits on a battleship in the same waters. All the bombers got back undamaged.

The big thriller, however, was the stirring battle put up by the U. S. S. Heron, a small seaplane tender, which fought off a seven-hour attack by 15 Japanese bombers in the Far East. She destroyed one four-motored flying boat, badly damaged at least one other, and was able to make port safely despite one bomb hit.

SMASH: Reds Break Through German Lines At Sevastopol

(By Associated Press)

Russia's long-besieged garrison at Sevastopol appeared to have broken German lines around that key Black sea naval base today, while Soviet transports boldly attempted to land troops on the Crimean west coast 40 miles to the rear of the Nazi siege armies.

Front-line dispatches said Russian troops had sallied forth from Sevastopol, advancing at a number of points to smash German outposts and destroy fortifications.

At the same time, the Berlin radio acknowledged that the Red armies had broken "the German main line" before Moscow—perhaps referring to the vital Mozhaisk sector, 57 miles west of the Russian capital, where the Germans have concentrated powerful forces.

A bulletin from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters, indicating that the Russians are now in full command of the Black sea waters around the Crimea, said German warplanes bombed Soviet troop transports off Yevpatoriya, 40 miles north of Sevastopol.

The communication said three of the Russian transports were damaged and a protecting speedboat was sunk.

It seemed clear that the Russians, already over-running the Crimea in a tempestuous counter-invasion, were seeking to gain a toehold on the west coast where they could trap the Germans by cutting off the escape route north to the narrow Perekop isthmus.

Dispatches to the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—No one contests the necessity for an absolute veil of military secrecy on the position and movements of ships and troops, especially when they are not known to the enemy. No one will argue that the military and naval authorities must make the decision for suppression of news in their own unlimited discretion.

But it is equally as important that the civilian population have complete confidence in those authorities and that, while it is necessary to maintain such lack of information as might fool the enemy, we must not give the impression of trying to fool our people.

Gen. Johnson.

The early reluctance to give out any information about the disaster at Pearl Harbor didn't set well with press and public. Even when it came it didn't even pretend to be complete. It never has been completed as to the extent of airplane losses. Furthermore, in appraising both that catastrophe and its sequels in the Philippines, and perhaps to the British battleships Prince of Wales and Repulse and the threat to Singapore, the first two at least have been "played down."

We are being told that the Philippines couldn't be held anyway and that our twin disasters in the Pacific are "just the usual losses of democracies" of the first battles of a campaign.

They were very much more than that. There is every indication that up to Pearl Harbor, the allies relied strongly on a great air fleet in Oahu to support both Singapore and Luzon. At least, and without warning, very drastic steps were taken immediately after Pearl Harbor, such as the ban on the purchase of automobile tires. Something had happened that rendered our supply of rubber far more doubtful. A few days earlier it had been announced that MacArthur would command the Far East. Before the news was cold the yellow hordes were swarming over him right on the heels of Pearl Harbor, and no sufficient air force came to his relief. Also the fleet promptly disappeared and no word of it has been heard.

With Singapore beleagured or taken our fleet could not possibly fight the Japanese fleet off Japan. It would have no far eastern base and it is to be observed that even the British are not bottling up any more important ships in Singapore.

If, as is now said and has been said in this column for years, the Philippines could not be held, why did we risk sacrifice of such great soldiers as MacArthur and Wainright and thousands of Americans and loyal Filipinos and the city of Manila by destruction?

We are told that "when we get into stride" we will take them back. It is a lot easier to lose a position as strong as that one by insufficient supply and garrison than it is to "take it back" so far from home.

Every informed observer knows that we have suffered in the Pacific more than the usual "initial set-back" of democracies. We have lost the jumping-off places on which our strategy was based.

But is it a wise way to handle the American public to emphasize all the favorable chances and soft-pedal the doubtful ones?

There has been very little insistance on news thus far withheld. The whereabouts and condition of our fleets are shrouded in mystery. But everybody accepts that and the decision to make it so in absolute good faith. Nevertheless, when the veil is lifted, we all hope that the decision will be shown to have been a wise precaution to strengthen our defense and not an effort to keep further bad news away from our shores.

HIGHER PRICES SPUR FARMERS IN FOOD DRIVE

Market Statistics Show Big Increases In Livestock, Butter and Eggs.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO—With first effects of the "food for freedom" drive of American agriculture already apparent, the more than 6,000,000 U. S. farmers enrolled in a unique effort to fight the war with plowshares today were goaded by highest general price levels since 1930.

Market statistics showed that at the start of the new year prices of livestock ranged from 12 to 42 per cent higher than a year ago; grains from 18 to 41 per cent higher; butterfat 16 per cent higher and eggs 70 per cent higher.

These are statistics farmers are weighing as they formulate 1942 operating plans along with advice received from farmer committeemen representing Uncle Sam who are compiling results of the most unusual canvass in agricultural history, recently completed.

Individual farmers, already fighting the "battle of food" with 1941 bumper crops and greatly expanded livestock production, have been shown what they can do best to share in the 1942 program. This outline, coupled with the fact that poultry feeding for eggs, and livestock breeding and fattening for meat and dairy products have become much more attractive than last year, on the basis of price trends, will guide them in translating their efforts into commodities for the larder of democracy.

Production goals of some commodities, originally outlined several months ago, may be increased in the light of recent developments. Producers generally realize there is a surplus of feeding grains, largest in 20 years, but that feed is essential for production of meat, milk, butter, eggs and the like.

Furthermore, government officials have indicated they are not adverse to permitting prices of certain commodities to exceed even 110 per cent of parity limits provided in pending price control legislation, if necessary to stimulate production.

There is an unusual assortment of items of which farmers will be asked to produce much greater quantities in 1942. Soybeans, milk, eggs, butter, cheese, pork, lard, beef, fruits and vegetables are on the "must" list, instead of basic crops like wheat, cotton and corn to which agriculture turned a quarter of a century ago in its war effort.

It's with a sigh of relief that Mansfield's two Navy recruiting officers are looking forward to resuming their recruiting trips to nearby towns, now that the initial rush of applicants for the U. S. Navy has waned. The officers have been on duty at the postoffice 24 hours a day since the war. Tomorrow they will begin making weekly trips to Mt. Vernon on Wednesdays, and to Bucyrus on Fridays to enlist applicants there, staggering the trips so as to always leave at least one officer and an assistant at the Mansfield station.

Jesse Beer, faculty member and former principal of Mansfield high school, found himself cast in the role of the absent-minded professor at The News-Journal football banquet for the undefeated Tygers last night at Mansfield-Leland hotel. Beer got to the banquet in time, and then spent some anxious moments wondering whether he could get in. "I changed clothes and left my ticket in my other suit at home," he explained. "Will I have to go clear out there now and get it?" The problem was solved without the trip home.

Burton also said that the boathouse would be kept heated so that skaters would have a warm place to change skates. Workers were clearing North lake this afternoon but warned skaters against using Maple lake for a few days.

LABOR TAKES NEW ROLE IN WARTIME JOB

Pooling of Tool and Factory Resources Planned By Joint Committee.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The one-day-old automotive labor-management committee started converting the entire motor industry to war production today under government orders to double its output over the peacetime rate.

With the appointment of the joint committee by the office of production management, labor stepped into a new and significant role in the military production scheme—that of a co-equal of management in a war industry's relationship with the government.

Five men from each side of the industry's economic fence were named to the group which develop plans to pool tool and plant resources for production of planes, tanks, ordnance and war-essential machine tools on a redoubled scale. The OPM may approve, revise or reject the plans, which must provide for production of about six billion dollars worth of war goods this year as compared to less than half that value in automobiles during pre-war years.

Ranging in a makeup from the presidents of huge motor firms to sub-chieftains of the CIO and AFL, the committee was expected to choose a chairman at its first meeting today.

It was selected from members of the industry advisory committee and the labor advisory committee—by OPM Director William S. Knudsen, and Associate Director Sidney Hillman. Knudsen told yesterday's day-long meeting of labor, industry and government representatives that automobile firms and workers must expect civilian motor car production to be halted entirely about Jan. 31. This action was inevitable, Knudsen said, because the industry must handle 5 billion dollars worth of additional war and navy orders, and speed-up 1942 deliveries of military items so that five or six billion dollars worth will come off assembly lines this year instead of the previously scheduled two and a half billion dollars worth.

There was a difference of opinion on the ability of the industry to do the job. C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors, told reporters after the conference that while his company could start production on the new orders "within a few weeks," he doubted whether the industry could achieve five billion dollars in war production in the twelve months.

It was learned also that in the closed session Wilson proposed that passenger car production be continued beyond Jan. 31 to avoid severe dislocation in the industry.

The OPM last night set passenger car production quotas for the present month at a total of 204,848 cars, instead of the 102,424 announced in December.

URGES FARMERS SPEED REPAIRS

Ohio AAA Chairman Points To Scarcity In Essential Farm Equipment.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Ohio farmers being asked to increase 1942 crops were urged today to purchase needed equipment or make necessary repairs while parts still are available.

"There is a scarcity of farm equipment and farmers should get their orders in at once so that the steel may be allocated," said Elmer F. Kruse, state chairman of the agricultural adjustment administration.

He indicated that farmers lacking proper equipment might find themselves unable to cash in on wartime production increases anticipated from lands "in the best condition since 1920."

"During the past six years Ohio farmers through conservation have built up the fertility of the land," Kruse said. "In the present Emergency, farmers can afford to draw on that margin of fertility to accomplish the production increase which they're planning."

Although a 20 per cent cut in material for new farm machinery has been ordered, a 50 per cent boost is on the Washington books for repair parts, an AAA spokesman said.

The state defense council has announced that county councils and the farm extension service will furnish farmers with printed check lists to use as guides in examining machinery.

Some counties plan meetings to instruct farmers to make major repairs.

NAMED AGAIN

Mitchell Elected Chairman of County Commissioners.

C. L. Mitchell today had been chosen chairman of the board of Richland county commissioners for the sixth consecutive year, while P. S. Carroll was re-appointed clerk of the board for the ninth year.

The commissioners also renamed County Dog Warden William Miller and the staff of custodians at the courthouse, including Anton Moritz, head janitor; Frank Vidmar, Mrs. Verna Long, Mrs. Geneva T. McCondichie, and Mrs. Bertha McLane.

Mitchell started the final year of his second term. The other members of the board, Ray Hout and Guy Stewart, will serve through 1943.

A resolution also was passed stripping the council president of his most powerful prerogative—apointment of the council's committees.

DRAFT HEAD SEES MORE WOMEN IN JOBS OF MEN FIT TO FIGHT

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey said in a radio address last night that "a gradual but constant" substitution of women for those men who are fit to fight could be expected in the next few months.

"The selective service system will be mindful of the need for good and for the men who know how to grow it," he said. "At the same time the system will expect industry and agriculture to use to the maximum individuals who do not possess the capacities for service in the armed forces."

Hershey said there would be no reduction in vigilance to protect the production of industries supplying the armed forces of this country and allied nations. Students will be permitted to continue their studies when by so doing they "became trained for professions in which there is a scarcity."

"The man with actual dependents who are supported by his earned income will continue to be deferred," he said.

All must contribute their efforts to the war effort, Hershey said, adding:

"There cannot be avenues by which men evade their responsibilities. No profession, no skill, no occupation, no industry shall become the refuge of the slackers."

CONFERS HERE

Metzenbaum To Meet With Defense Groups.

Richland county councils of civilian defense will be instructed in their local responsibilities during war time by James Metzenbaum of Cleveland, state senator and inspector general in national civilian defense, who speaks in Mansfield Wednesday at 8 p. m., in the American Legion home.

Called by Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, Mansfield chairman of civilian defense, the meeting will be restricted to certified county defense councils, heads of county, city and township government and all agencies co-operating in the civilian defense program. Prior to the meeting Metzenbaum will confer with Kalbfleisch regarding the county program.

The inspector general comes to Mansfield from a similar meeting in Springfield. Named by New York's Mayor LaGuardia as one of four inspector generals of civilian defense, Metzenbaum occupies a position that carries supervisory and educational functions over local and state defense councils.

Sheriff Has $373 To Give Away— To Right People

The money represents unclaimed balances from sheriff's sales during the past year. His deputies posted notices in the courthouse to tell the owners where it can be found.

The unclaimed amounts range from 19 cents to $107.97. The sheriff had the names of seven of the 11 persons who failed to collect the funds due them after the sales of real estate and chattels. The other four were not available.

Listed among the prospective claimants were Rufus Crider, John Ritchie, Jetta Miller, Katherine Ackerman, Dorothy D. Arnold, Albert Arnold, and Ray Foncannon.

Milkman Will Get More Sleep Under Conservation Plan

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Your milkman will get more sleep and a day off every week if a plan of the Ohio Milk Distributors' association to conserve vital war materials is put into effect through the state.

The plan, already approved by Gov. John W. Bricker and submitted to the state defense council, would conserve trucks, tires, gasoline, oil and other materials by reducing mileage in milk delivery schedules, by standardizing types and sizes of bottles and by eliminating some grades of milk and cream.

"While the suggested changes might not be practical in all communities their adoption wherever possible would be of considerable aid in conserving vital materials," Governor Bricker said.

Under the program, milk would be delivered during daylight hours to enable the milkman to make collections on his regular delivery trip instead of making a costly second call. Milk would be delivered not more than six days a week and, in cities where it was practical, only four days a week.

Bright approached the "boss," who was a soft-spoken, well-dressed type and who was riffling through the manuscript. "You wrote dis?" he said.

The author nodded palely.

MUST BE GOOD

ROME —(ANDI Agency to AP)— The Turin newspaper La Stampa in an editorial today commended General Douglas MacArthur's "resistance, courage, energy and obstunacy" in the American commander's defense of the Philippines.

"Events have shown that, if he is not abandoned by his native troops, he will prolong his resistance," the article declared.

In the Dutch East Indies, where a communique reported the loss of a second Netherlands submarine, there were no important new developments of a military nature, but in China a counter-offensive launched against the Japanese at Changsha was believed to have been entirely successful.

Japanese troops, originally estimated at 150,000, were caught in a Chinese encirclement and a heavy rainstorm between Changsha and the Laotao river, according to Chungking, and were said to be facing annihilation.

Japanese losses already had been estimated at more than 50,000 men and Chungking dispatches said that Japanese air forces were unable to come to the aid of the trapped columns because of the storms.

Tokyo, on the other hand, claimed in a broadcast that Japanese troops held Changsha and that the Chinese had suffered 19,000 casualties and 7,000 prisoners. The Japanese broadcasts also claimed that their troops were making rapid progress against American forces on Luzon island and had "virtualled collapsed" Corregidor fortress. Waves of Japanese aircraft were said to have pounded at Corregidor, Olongapo and Malolos in an effort to knock out remaining American defenses.

The troops under Gen. Douglas MacArthur "face final annihilation or surrender" soon, the Tokyo broadcast asserted.

In regard to Malaya, the Japanese broadcast said that the fall of Kuala Lumpur was expected "within the next couple of days" and that Japanese planes had taken a heavy toll of British tanks and sunk a 3,000-ton ship in the Malaya operations.

Confident Japs Pick 'Quisling'

NEW YORK —(INS)— Japan already has selected its "quisling" to rule a "free and united Malaya," the German wireless reported from Tokyo today.

He was identified as Prince Regent Tong Abdurrahman of Kedah, son of the 72-year-old sultan, Abdul Hamim.

The prince was jailed by British authorities at the outbreak of hostilities because of his activities but was liberated by the Japs when they captured Penang.

Allied Headquarters Planned in Java

BATAVIA —(INS)— Headquarters of the united armed forces high command in the Far East will be established on the Island of Java, Netherlands East Indies officials disclosed today.

From headquarters in this archipelago, which forms the strategic gateway between the Pacific and Indian oceans, Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, supreme commander of united land, sea and air forces in the southwestern Pacific, will direct the war against Japan, it was disclosed.

Coincident with disclosure of the plan to wage a Pacific war from a base in Java, it was revealed that Dr. H. J. Van Mook, newly appointed lieutenant governor-general of the East Indies, hac arrived in Australia for "conversations with leading personalities."

Major General George H. Brett, commander-in-chief of the United States Army Air Corps, is second in command under Wavell.

Bag 60 Jap Planes In Burma Fighting

RANGOON, Burma—(INS)—Dramatic stories of air battles in which volunteer American fliers are knocking Jap planes out of the skies were related in Rangoon today.

On Sunday afternoon, in a sky battle over the outskirts of Rangoon, six American fighter planes took on 27 Jap fighters and shot down at least two, probably four.

(Editor's note: The London Daily Express reported from Rangoon that Chinese airmen are helping to shoot down Japanese raiders over Rangoon. This account said Chinese and American airmen are reported to have destroyed no less than 60 Jap planes in four air battles.)

In Sunday's battle with the 27 Japs, the volunteer American airmen lost three planes, but the pilots of all are safe.

Chinese Press On After Triumph

CHUNGKING—(INS)—With Jap forces driven back 10 miles from Changsha after suffering one of their greatest defeats, Chinese troops launched a sudden two-pronged sweep against Ichang today.

Military dispatches said the Chinese debouched from the mountains of western Hupeh province and sped down the gorges north of the Yangtze river to smash at Ichang from two sides.

Ichang is about 300 miles northwest of Changsha and represents the peak of the Jap advance in the Hupeh area. Last October the Chinese were within an ace of recapturing Ichang but were driven out at the last moment by the Japanese. At the time, the Chinese charged the Japs with using lewisite and mustard gas.

The new assault on Ichang was believed to be the opening gun of a fresh general Chinese counter-offensive on several fronts.

AIR SUCCESSES CHEER CAPITAL

Blows To Jap Fleet Prove U. S. Bombers Are Arriving In Far East.

For the courageous way he fought his ship, Lieutenant William Leverete Kabler, the skipper, was awarded the navy cross and immediately promoted to lieutenant commander.

Between the Heron and the success of the army bombers, attention was momentarily distracted last night from the grim, all-but-hopeless last stand General Douglas MacArthur was making on Luzon with his battle-tired American and Filipino veterans.

MacArthur, according to the last reports, was continuing to give an excellent account of himself, maneuvering his badly outnumbered troops so as to force the Japanese to resort to costly frontal assaults for every inch of ground gained.

The re-appearance of American bombers in the South Pacific theater promised to increase the price the enemy will have to pay for the Philippines. However, there was no indication of an improvement in MacArthur's local situation.

The communique announcing the bomber attacks on Japanese warships off Davao was the first mention of American air activity in the Philippine area in many days. Previous advices from the islands have intimated broadly that the strength of the defending air force had been steadily whittled away by combat losses and ground bombing until it was all but wiped out. Moreover, Japanese advances have accounted for all the known major flying fields both on Luzon, the largest island, and on Mindanao, the second largest.

The belief here, therefore, was that the army bombers probably were operating from bases in The Netherlands East Indies, or possibly from fields on Australian-mandate islands.

Netherlands authorities have been stressing the damage that could be inflicted on the enemy from East Indies bases if additional planes were rushed to that theater. Prime Minister Churchill replied a week ago with the pledge that Britain and the United States were going to the aid of those colonies. Yesterday's raid was the first indication that the initial installment of assistance already has arrived.

From a naval point of view, the most important result of yesterday's Davao raid were the three direct hits scored on one of Japan's battleships, for it tended to reduce the temporary advantage the enemy gained by the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

One Japanese battleship already has been sunk off the Philippines, a second was "effectively bombed" and badly damaged, and now a third has been damaged.

The class of the Japanese warship hit in yesterday's raid was not disclosed. The two previous victims of U. S. bombers in Philippine waters have been ships of the Kngo class, which predate the start of the World war. Japan apparently has not risked her newer dreadnaughts to support operations against the Philippines.

Fear Netherlands Submarine Lost

BATAVIA —(INS)— A Netherlands submarine attached to the British fleet in east Asiatic waters has failed to return to its base and is feared to have been lost, the Netherlands naval commander-in-chief announced today.

The announcement said the submarine is known to have been operating in an area "well patrolled by the enemy."

This is the second submarine lost by the Dutch since the beginning of the Pacific war. Dutch victories over the Japanese at sea have far outnumbered the relatively few Dutch losses.

Orphaned Pups, New Owner

Kindly Expressmen Find Home For A Pair Of Orphaned Pups

By BUD SPRUNGER

Two Richland county "orphans" have homes today because of the kindness of Mansfield Railway Expressmen.

The two are Butch and Spike. (I named 'em myself) baby Golden Shepherd dogs born near Mifflin before Christmas.

Their owner, desiring to sell them, shipped them to the Royal Kennels at Chazy, N. Y., but the kennels shipped them back to Mansfield after the holidays, C. O. D.

When the owner refused to accept them, the expressmen quartered them in their office and advised the kennels of the pups' plight. The kennels owner was sorry, but refused to pay express charges to have them returned.

After five days of caring for the animals—giving them milk, bread, dog food and water—E. C. Spoerr, expressman, contacted Mrs. William Schaus who lives on the West Fourth street road.

Mrs. Schaus, who at one time raised collies, brought her four-year-old grandson, William Eugene Schwartz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Schwartz, into the office and for a partial payment of the carrying charges, she obtained the dogs.

Right now Butch and Spike are headed for a hot bath at Schwartz home on the Park avenue west road. They show no ill effects from their travels and off-the-cuff housing.

"They're both good dogs," Spoerr said, "and we've had no trouble with them at all. They haven't howled once and have always been very patient with us when we experimented with their diet."

(Editor's Note: It seems that Bud was slightly in error when he named the dogs—on the spur of the moment—Butch and Spike. One of them turned out to be a girl dog.)

FDR CALLS FOR 125,000 PLANES IN WAR PLANS

Promises Victory In Annual Address To Congress on State of Nation.

by 26 nations united against the Axis forces.

"The militarists in Berlin and Tokyo started this war," the chief executive charged sternly. "But the massed, angered forces of common humanity will finish it."

The war cannot be waged in a defensive spirit, the president declared, adding:

"As our power and our resources are fully mobilized, we shall carry the attack against the enemy—we shall hit him and hit him again wherever and whenever we can reach him.

"We must keep him far from our shores, for we intend to bring this battle to him on his own home grounds."

Wherever in the world it seems advisable to engage enemy forces Mr. Roosevelt said, American armed forces must be used. The operations in some cases are to be defensive and in others offensive with a view to complete encirclement and "eventual total defeat" of the foes.

"American armed forces will operate at many points in the Far East," the chief executive said.

"American armed forces will be on all the oceans—helping to guard the essential communications which are vital to the united nations.

"American land and air and sea forces will take stations in the British Isles, which constitute an essential fortress in this world struggle.

"American armed forces will help to protect this hemisphere—and also bases outside this hemisphere, which could be used for an attack on the Americas."

In these terse paragraphs, the president gave a sketchy picture of possible operations of another American expeditionary force and of possible occupation of strategic bases across the seas which otherwise might be used as jumping off places for onslaughts on this hemisphere.

Any long range bombing raids on America by "suicide" squadrons of enemy planes from Europe or Asia, Mr. Roosevelt predicted, will be attempted only in the hope of terrorizing our people and disrupting our morale. But our people are not afraid of that, he remarked.

"We know that we may have to pay a heavy price for freedom," he continued. "We will pay this price with a will. Whatever the price, it is a thousand times worth it.

"No matter what our enemies, in their desperation may attempt to do to us—we will say, as the people of London have said, 'we can take it.' And what's more, we can give it back—and we will give it back—with compound interest.

"When our enemies challenged our country to stand up and fight, they challenged each and everyone of us. And each and every one of us has accepted the challenge—for himself and for the nation."

The message was the annual one to congress on the state of the union. At the very outset, the president said he was proud to report that the spirit of the American people was never higher, that the union was never more closely knit together, that the country was never more deeply determined to face the solemn tasks before it.

He outlined the steps leading up to America's entry into the new world conflict and declared that our own objectives were clear: Smashing the militarism imposed by war lords on their enslaved peoples, liberating subjugated nations, establishing and securing freedom of speech, freedom of religions, freedom from want and freedom from fear everywhere in the world.

TRAFFIC DROPS

New York Congestion Relieved by Reduced Use of Cars.

NEW YORK — (INS) — A sharp drop in automobile traffic in New York City—estimated by some experts as a 40 per cent decrease—was recorded today. As a result traffic flowed more freely.

Several reasons including double fines for overtime parking, tire rationing, fear of tire thefts, bad weather and the new state financial responsibility law were advanced for the reduced automobile travel.

era and three statements that short-wave equipment had been removed from their radios.

Meanwhile other cities had even poorer results from the collection. Cincinnati police reported they had received 57 cameras, 12 short-wave sets and four firearms. Aliens turned in 134 contraband items in Cleveland and 17 in Toledo.

Although the deadline was 11 p. m. yesterday, it is believed that Uncle Sam may have to extend his deadline for collecting contraband. Many cities reported that no collections were made because receipt forms for forbidden artices had not been received.

Bates and Robinson said that they had received their receipt forms and had used them as directed. They said they had received no indication of an extension of the deadline.

Bates pointed out that in 52 cases, 28 guns were found to be in alien hands. The guns were mostly old shotguns, rifles and revolvers.

Both Bates and Robinson said they are awaiting further instructions from the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the U. S. attorney-general's office.

Bates said that he will no longer accept any articles being handed in by aliens because the deadline has passed. Although he has no orders to confiscate alien property as yet, Bates said that a close check is being kept on all known aliens.

233 in the general fund as compared to $319,370 in 1941, an increase of approximately $25,000 while the sinking fund appropriation has dropped from $86,840 to $77,567.

Still to be included in the appropriations bill for Mansfield are special street repair funds, sewer and waterworks appropriations, police and fire pensions and public recreation and garbage funds.

The total for all appropriations last year was $622,576. City employes are working out the proposed expenditures in these additional departments and will add them to the proposed budget.

The new finance committee of city council, which will be appointed tonight or tomorrow, will then study the appropriations bill and will probably make reductions or additions to some of the funds. At tonight's meeting, a date of council's consideration of the completed bill will also be set.

The city's payroll is due on about Jan. 18 and cannot be paid until the appropriations bill is passed. The ordinance was passed on Jan. 13 last year.

County Auditor Wolfe said that there would be one change in the county's appropriations this year. The county has taken over the operation of the Richland County Tuberculosis sanatorium and will pay operating expenses. Previously the sanatorium was operated privately with the county making payments on a patient basis.

County commissioners are studying the appropriations problem and will meet with Wolfe within the next few days to take final action on it, according to Wolfe.

The state highway department reported that except in the northwest section of the state, all roads were in an icy condition and being treated with cinders.

Meanwhile, Mansfield firemen took precautions against a condition experienced at Lexington this morning when volunteer firefighters found a hydrant frozen directly in front of the Snyder garage blaze. They had to lay long hose lines to save adjoining buildings.

Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger said firemen were making an inspection of hydrants throughout the city today.

Lexington volunteers were summoned by Mrs. F. C. Green who was awakened by a passing truck driver. He had blown his horn to attract attention. Mrs. Green called the Lexington fire chief.

Snyder, awakened, removed four vehicles from the garage before they had time to catch fire. The building, built in 1851 by Rev. R. Gailey and operated until 1880 as a seminary, was burned to the ground.

Firemen poured water on the house, which was ablaze when they arrived. No estimate was given on the loss.

The Anlikers lost their entire belongings when their home burned to the ground. Ashland's community truck responded to the alarm but the blaze was beyond control when they arrived. They poured water on adjoining building. The home was owned by Philip Schmutzler, Mansfield restaurant proprietor.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1942.

It appears that even Fiorello LaGuardia isn't able to satisfactorily fill two full-time jobs.

They also perform patriotic service who only do their regular jobs better and more cheerfully than ever before.

An interesting communication, signed only, "An Old Farmer," should have included the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but to establish identity and responsibility. Anonymous communications cannot be printed.

Another Registration Day

ADDITIONAL thousands of Mansfield and Richland county men will be required to register Monday, February 16, under proclamation of President Roosevelt, who has fixed this date for enrollment of those who come within the expanded age limits of 20 to 44 years, inclusive.

It is in this age range that registrants will be considered eligible for military service, in the event of need for increase of manpower beyond the 21 to 35 bracket prescribed in the first call for registration under the selective service act.

The big job of registering men between the ages of 20 and 21 and those from 35 to 45 is again assigned as a one-day task, but it is anticipated that later registration of the 18-19 age group, and those between the ages of 45 and 65, will be less hurried.

Under reclassification and reduction of rigid physical requirements, further call will be made upon registrants in the 21-35 group, because of greater needs in actual warfare, and after next month's registration considerable time will be required before the process of drafting and sending additional men to training camps can be carried through. It is estimated that the present army of approximately 1,800,000 can be doubled within the 21-35 age range.

Meanwhile, it should be kept in mind that much important work is to be done at home, and that there will be an advantage in having youths and older men remain in present employment until actually called for training or military service, which for many will probably be several months or a year—or even longer—as has been the case with some of the original registrants.

Producing the essentials of war requires the work of many more people than are privileged to serve in the nation's armed forces, and, at the most, only a fraction of those who register will be called for military service.

Determination, among registrants as well as by all other Americans, should be to meet each day's task as it comes, not neglecting duties because of concern over the future.

Winston Churchill's toast to the new year is worth keeping in mind: "Here's to 1942. Here's to a year of toil, a year of struggle and peril—and a long step toward victory. God bless you! May we all come through safe and with honor."

Citizens Complain of Railroad Noises

SYMPATHY is extended to residents of the northwest part of the city whose rest is disturbed night after night by unnecessary—and illegal—shrieking of locomotive whistles and clanging of bells.

People who live a sufficient distance from railroads to at least partially escape these noises have little idea of their nerve-wracking effect.

It would appear, however, that appeal by victims of this nuisance should not be made to city council but to LAW ENFORCEMENT agencies of the city, of which Mayor Locke is head, and responsible for administration policies.

The city ordinance on this subject reads: "It shall be unlawful for any person to sound or cause to be sounded the whistle of any locomotive engine within the corporate limits of the city of Mansfield, except at street or railroad crossings and when it may be actually necessary to prevent accident."

Another section of the same ordinance provides: "It shall be unlawful for any person to disturb the peace and good order of this city by unusual and unnecessary noise. . . ."

Which seems to show that there is ample "law" to take care of both the excessive whistle-sounding and bell-ringing of which petitioners complain.

Complainants say: "We do not know whether we have been so treated because of ignorance, or wilfully neglected."

Assuming, for the moment, that the cause is the first of the two mentioned, it may be suggested that procedure to greatly reduce the present nuisance of excessive whistling and bell-ringing is quite simple. Complaint should be made by the mayor, safety director or police chief to responsible officials of the railroads involved, with recital of specific instances of violations, and in the event of continuance of the practice, the individual railway employes who indulge in long-time whistle-blowing and bell-ringing should be arrested and fined, as provided by ordinance.

Although city council has no responsibility in this particular matter, the idea of enacting a general anti-noise ordinance, which has been under advisement, still merits consideration.

From Desk To Waste Basket

THE ANNUAL desk-cleaning rests painfully on the conscience. There are two schools of thought in this matter. Some hold that the best way to clean a desk for a new year is ruthlessly to sweep all its contents, unexamined, into the wastepaper basket. Perhaps something useful or interesting or important is lost in this way, but life goes on and a lot of time is saved.

The other school takes more time and, possibly, has more fun. Members of this group look over every scrap of paper, every clipping, every letter. Those that quickly reveal their lack of present value flutter to the waste basket, while the others are reprieved for at least another year. This system calls for decision and selection, difficult for many desk-owners but probably character-strengthening.

Occasionally there are rare rewards. Samuel Pepys, according to his diary, found several "charmes" among his papers during such an annual "redding up." He quoted some of them in the diary, showing that they interested or amused him, and thereby provided the same pleasure for readers to this day.

Horse racing has been stopped in California because of the war—but it's too soon to revise the proverb, "A fool and his money are soon parted."

There's an undercurrent of surprise in the notation that "all the world seems to be at war except Ireland."

BIG HELP TO WILL POWER

Listen World!

They Got Together

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THIS is one of those incidents that never make the front page. Yet, I wonder. Perhaps when the shouting's all over, we'll find they did as much to hold the world together as all the ships and subs, planes and fighting men.

There are about eighteen families in the crowd, with the usual ratio of old folks, youngsters, pups, white mice and pet turtles. They live on a jumbled street on the edge of the city, where the fields begin. Not green enough to be country, not glittery enough to be town. Folks the same way. Nobody bustin' rich, nobody beggar poor. Houses like the folks. Comfortable but shabby around the edges. Spotty lawns... tousled hedges...imitation jig-saw villas. Kids, o'course, swarming all over the place...laughing, squabbling, dancing to the radio, going to the movies, raiding the ice box. You know the kind of place.

The kind those boys were fighting for on Wake Island.

The kind they died for in Pearl Harbor, the other day.

A sort of dream...a sort of mess...a sort of glory.

A-M-E-R-I-C-A!

So, there they were all living together, those eighteen families—yet not. And, s'far as the kids went, it was jake. Kids are natural democrats. They don't need to be told what America means, they are born knowing. But the Dads 'n' Moms, that's different. Sometimes, coming back from marketing or the day's job, that street got their goat. They didn't know what it meant...nor what they, themselves meant...NOR WHAT AMERICA MEANT. And the deeper we got into the defense work, the less they knew.

Sure, they lived together. Gossipped...quarreled over the kids ...loaned each other baking powder, cigarets, bobby pins. But still they didn't seem to belong. Not to each other, nor to the hurried, worried world around them. Everyone else was doing something with a wallop. War work...Bundles for Britain... First Aid...women learning to drive ambulances...men doing target practice...everyone so excited their eyes bugged.

But those eighteen families out there—they weren't doing anything. Weren't excited about anything. Didn't have money enough...time enough...energy enough. They were America, too. Just as much America as anyone. But they were left out. Millions and millions of Americans—left out. Watching the world march away and leave them.

Then, one day, one of the women had a hunch. Nothing very dramatic. I warned you it would not be. Just a hunch that maybe they'd feel better if they got together...got to know each other better...got to know what was happening...well, maybe that would be something. Not much, but something.

So what? So they did. That was three months ago. Today you wouldn't know that street. The lawns are just as spotty, the clothes-lines just as saggy. But something's happening. Those eighteen families have come alive! They wait for that weekly meeting as it were the Rose Bowl Carnival. The women have taken up knitting. The men are doing target practice in an old garage. They've chipped in, bought a big new globe...a wall map and a lot of those colored tacks. Each night, before they part, they sing the National Anthem, say the Lord's Prayer. They're watching the war. They're watching life.

THEY'RE GUARDING AMERICA...AND WHEREVER THEY GO, THEY'RE SPREADING THE CONTAGION OF THEIR NEW FAITH AND COURAGE.

Well, I told you it wouldn't make the Front Page. And yet, I wonder. Perhaps when the shouting's over, we'll find they did as much to hold the world together as all the ships and subs, planes and fighting men. Perhaps they're what we mean when we say:

No Time For Flub-Dub.

When a huge tanker—12,700 tons—slid down the ways at Quincy, Mass., 76 days after the keel was laid, a world record for rapid construction of such large ships was broken.

Since the United States is at war with the Axis powers, it will be necessary to equal or better that record frequently to increase the merchant fleet and to replace ships which surely will be lost by blitz attack by submarines or bombers.

The usual colorful and expensive flub-dub of society event launchings will be eliminated by Maritime Commission order. This is sound and sensible procedure. It will save both time and money for the grim business immediately at hand.—Toledo Blade.

Pagan Culture.

Editor News-Journal:

The idiosyncracies of pagan ideology are phychologically interesting.

The illusion of race superiority, the bigoted idea of totalitarian supremacy and the carnalism complex of hatred, sensualism, cruelty, intolerance, persecution, aggression, atheism and desecration of the sacred and beautiful, reveal a super-paganism of despotic brutality; and which, it would seem, emanates from an apostatized leadership in the cause of political ethics.

But there is something greater than the materialistic and physical force in the cause of power, which the totalitarian despoilers have ignored: for, without the spiritual, moral qualities of decency, no cause can long endure.

A system of culture based on animalism and power brutality predatorily exists till inevitable disintegration destroys it.

The doctrine of physical force when wrongly used in destroying others, ultimately destroys itself. Power in the wrong finally meets disaster.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Joan of Arc, the "Maid of Orleans," was born on Jan. 6, 1412. In less than two months after having mounted her white charger at the head of the French, this inspired maid led her forces to victory over the English at Jargeau, Beaugency and Patay and had driven them beyond the Loire. The French heroine was later captured and burned at the stake. Pope Pius X beatified her in 1909.

FBI Not Responsible for Failure To Clean Up Hawaii Fifth Column

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON — Certain gentlemen who would like to shift responsibility for Pearl Harbor have been spreading the yarn that J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI were to blame for the navy being caught asleep on the memorable and tragic day of December 7.

Real inside story on this, however, can now be told, namely that as early as last spring, Head G-Man Hoover urged that he be permitted to arrest, or at least oust from the Hawaiian Islands, the 250 Japanese consular agents operating there.

Hoover argued that Japan didn't need 250 consular agents in a little place like Hawaii in the first place. In the second place he produced concrete evidence that at least one of them had tried to get information on U. S. fleet movements.

General Short, in command at Hawaii, since removed, objected to Hoover's plan. He said it would cause too much commotion. Nevertheless, Hoover persisted, took the matter over General Short's head to Washington. Secretary of War Stimson supported General Short and nothing was done.

After Pearl Harbor, the Japanese consulate was taken over and its papers searched. Among them was found a code of signals by lights; so many lights would show that the U. S. destroyers had left Pearl Harbor; so many lights would indicate that the battleships had left; another light arrangement would signal that the destroyers had returned and so on. . .

This code completely corroborated Hoover's contention that the Japanese consular agents were the mainspring of Japanese espionage.

Note: Hoover actually caught two Japanese spies red-handed in the United States, but was forced by the state department to send them back to Tokyo instead of placing them on trial. One was a full Japanese naval captain caught with U. S. naval documents in his possession, and indicted on Hoover's evidence. The other was a Japanese language student attached to the Japanese embassy who was caught among the 37 Axis spies who were indicted in New York through Hoover's efforts. However, the state department ordered his immediate release. His name was not even released to the newspapers.

No. 1 War Bottleneck.

ON THE surface, most important results of the Churchill-Roosevelt conversations were plans for war strategy in the South Pacific and Russia, plus formal declarations for future cooperation. Behind the scenes, however, almost equally important was some tough talking which Lord Beaverbrook did about the slowness of American industrial production.

Beaverbrook's lecture has now led to concrete plans for strict government supervision of the most vital defense bottleneck—the machine tool industry.

The Machine Tool section of OPM has prepared a report showing that not more than $1,250,000,000 of new machine tools will be produced in 1942, whereas the war effort will require at least $2,350,000,000 of them. "Unless this amount is made available," the OPM report states, "we may expect the arms production to be dangerously inadequate until mid-1943 or into 1944."

The Army-Navy Munitions board also estimates that Germany now has under its control (not counting Japan) at least 700,000 machine tools less than nine years old; while this country has only 520,000 less than 10 years old. Furthermore, German tools were built for war purposes, most of ours for peacetime.

* * *

Slow Rolls Royce.

TO EMPHASIZE what lack of machine tools has meant, it can be pointed out that the famous Rolls Royce airplane motors which Packard contracted to build in the spring of 1940 have only been delivered to the extent of about 100 engines. And it is now 1942.

These are the motors which Henry Ford refused to manufacture at the time of the fall of France, because they were British. Later Packard agreed to make them, but waited several weeks to see what the new tax bill passed by congress was going to be. This caused part of the delay. Also the fact that the motors were British slowed things up somewhat, for the Army and Navy Munitions board has given higher raw material priorities to American engines.

However, the really big reason for Packard's delay was lack of machine tools. It simply has not been able to tool up its plant—even though 18 months have passed since the fall of France and the placing of the contract.

Another illustration of how badly machine tools are needed is that Charles Sorenson of Ford, until recently, had been yelling at the OPM for weeks trying to get 229 machine tools to go into production of a Pratt-Whitney engine for medium bombers. Sorenson used to be able to call up Warner and Swasey in Cleveland on a Friday and have a machine tool costing $60,000 delivered on his dock at the River Rouge, Mich., by Monday morning. But today it's a different story.

That is why the OPM report recommends the following measures to remedy bottleneck No. 1 of war production.

1. Machine tools, like manpower, should be registered.
2. A government Machine Tools board would assign tools for most effective use.
3. Tools and arms plants must go on a 168-hour week — every hour and every day of the week.
4. A new program to train labor to manufacture machine tools.

Strange Doings.

SOME things happening in Washington in the name of defense just don't make sense.

The Securities and Exchange commission and the Rural Electrification administration are two permanent government agencies making real contributions to the conduct of the war. Hardly a day goes by that the SEC is not called on for otherwise unobtainable corporate and financial data for the placing of war orders. In many other ways it is assisting the war program.

In addition to constantly furnishing crack power engineers to various war agencies, the REA is operating and building many power plants for army, navy and marine camps, and war industries.

Also the two agencies are among the most outstanding New Deal achievements, created only after long and bitter battles that made political and legislative history in the 1930's. Time and again the President has proudly acclaimed the SEC and REA as two of the greatest reforms of his administration.

Yet, under an order cooked up by undercover pro-utility elements in the budget bureau, SEC and REA will be moved kit and kaboodle hundreds of miles away from Washington.

While their utility lobby foes will have free rein to snipe at them on Capitol Hill, and while the war and navy departments, OPM and other war agencies will be seriously hampered in obtaining the valuable services of SEC and REA, they will be stuck far away in make-shift places.

It looks awfully funny and all signs indicate there is more to the affair than appears on the surface.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—If Roman coins weren't so unpopular nowadays, I'd suggest that Arturo Toscanini's head belongs on one. It's a very interesting head, and he's a very interesting guy.

He says he kissed his first girl, and smoked his first cigarette, on the same day, when he was seventeen—and hasn't cared for cigarettes since.

I can tell you that at 75 Papa Toscanini carries his work clothes around with him in a briefcase. When he is merely rehearsing, or recording, he wears an old Russian blouse. He likes this because when he lifts his arms his shirt-tail doesn't pop out of his pants.

* * *

I CAN tell you, too, that he carries with him a secret little box. It hasn't any springs, or locks to it. Not to the human eye, in any case. People have tried to open this curious little gadget, and failed. But Toscanini can, and does, open it. He just picks it up, and it flies open. He picks it up mostly during intermissions, when he is resting.

What's in it? Don't get excited now. It's gumdrops. And little cubes of sugar. "They give you instant energy," says Toscanini. It is an interesting commentary on our best known conductor that he enjoys a little sweetening between obbligatoes and andantes.

When you see Tosky in private life you think to yourself, "The old boy shouldn't run up those stairs that way. He's 75." But I don't think anything now alive could stop him. I saw him at Carnegie Hall the other afternoon, and he skipped up the stairs as if he were walking down hill. He had come to a recording session. He was going to conduct the NBC Symphony in a Brahms symphony for Victor. He had his briefcase with him, and his little box. Also Mama Toscanini, his two daughters, and son Walter. Mama Toscanini viewed the proceedings from an invalid's chair on the balcony. She is convalescing from a recent operation.

* * *

WHEN TOSKY arrived he said "Buon giorno" to the stagehands, and went to his dressing room. There he slipped into some bedroom slippers and his loose Russian blouse. He took a deep breath and flexed his muscles. There were three batons on the table, and a series of photographs of his wife when she was a bride and of their children when they were in swaddling clothes. Toscanini is, foremost, a family man. When he works, he likes to feel that his flock is around him.

Also when he works, he likes to sing. The maestro will win no prizes at the Met this season for his voice. He sings in a sort of high, strained gravel-voiced tenor. But he knows what he wants, and if it doesn't sound that way to you, that's your fault. He sings for key, or to interpret a passage to his liking.

Toscanini has an almost oriental trait of beginning his sentences with "is." If the violin section displeases him, he stomps his foot and shouts, "Is not right." When the matter is corrected, he says "Is so, we begin again."

The big moment, to those who are interested in watching a man like Arturo Toscanini conduct, comes when he climbs upon the podium and takes up his baton. Dead silence prevails. The old man leans forward. "Gentlemen, we begin," he says in mellow but strongly Italian accent. The baton breaks downward, and then the great hall, which only the moment before was silent and empty, is filled with a strange and beautiful music . . .

A Farmer's Diary

Four Years Old

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

TODAY is our column's fourth anniversary. It is four years since that first day when I ran out in ankle deep snow to pick up our Mansfield News-Journal, thrown off in front of the farmhouse by a newsboy in a car, and carried it up to the porch, there to scan it through for the heading "A Farmer's Diary." The editor had boxed the title and given it several inches of space on the Neighborhood News page . . . I had made a start on what has proved my happiest adventure.

Now, after four years of occupying newspaper space and readers' time and attention, I am still somewhat aghast at my own nerve and egotism—and humbly grateful to those of you who seem to like to read and share my farmerish views. The farm is a good and satisfying way of life. The country teems with things to enjoy—I shall never be wise enough to tell you all of them.

The first man I met when we had started this column, asked "Can you keep it up?" I couldn't be sure, then. Now I tell him, "Yes . . . so long as I live on the land . . . as long as I live! There will be always something new to learn and enjoy in Nature—and human nature.

But that first evening, in a kind of panic, we worked—my wife and I—until after midnight, making out three short paragraphs about the snowfall that had drifted in that morning, and left the countryside as white as an empty page. We felt the chill of that snow, we smelled and tasted it—we admired it and shoveled it and tracked it around for three more paragraphs, or so. When, next day, the newspaper put our stuff in heavy faced type we danced a jig in the snowbank below the hill and knew that we wouldn't ever again let our column frighten us.

I have told you before how we work as a team. Once, when a black widow spider bit me and I had blood poisoning for some weeks, my teammate was "pinch hitter" for days together. When those who know our way of doing try to kid me by declaring, "You're lucky to have a wife who can do your stuff for you," I quite agree. After all, a man must be given some credit who can marry a woman like that!

Her regular stint, though, is merely one a week—and when she had a baby, I did them all. So there!

A writer like myself lives his life three times—once when it happens first; again when he writes it down; and a third time when his friends react and he is allowed to share their feeling about what he has written.

I am a lucky man. I know it. My writing makes me rich—not in money, but in teamwork and in sharing. Like "bread upon the waters" it keeps coming back, after many days. Four years isn't long—but this is America! A man may, perhaps, get three terms! Anyhow, I thank you—and I mean it!

Uncertain Destiny + + + + + +

By Betty Webb

(Copyright 1942)

CHAPTER I

It was three minutes until five o'clock, and in the reception offices of Harcourt, Simmons and Hanover, Architects, pandemonium reigned.

Lost in the confusion of letters, envelopes and file baskets that littered her desk, Linda Phillips glanced briefly at her wrist watch and made a wry face.

"It's nearly five!" she wailed, turning to the middle-aged woman at the next desk, "and Mr. Harcourt hasn't signed his letters, and Kyle will be waiting for me downstairs, and maybe he'll get a traffic ticket, and—"

She paused for breath, staring thoughtfully at her co-worker.

"Jane—" she began uncertainly.

The other woman smiled, knowing what the request would be. Despite her austere manner, Jane Miller had a warm spot in her heart for Linda, and it was hard to refuse aid to Harcourt's little secretary.

"Run along and meet your sweetheart," she said smiling. "I'll get your letters in the mail and straighten your desk."

"Really?" The girl's face brightened happily. "I'll take you to lunch tomorrow for being such an angel."

Gathering up hat and purse, Linda blew an airy kiss to the other woman, and dashed through the door. Jane Miller watched as the slim figure disappeared down the corridor, thinking wistfully that her own youth had been drab and dull. There had been no young men waiting to drive her home after a busy day. No sparkling engagement ring had circled her finger.

Jane felt sudden nostalgia at her loss. On a sudden impulse she ran to the window to catch a final glimpse of Linda and her sweetheart. "How happy she must be," Jane thought. "She has everything she can want, and I have nothing."

Then, "You're nothing but a romantic old maid, Jane Miller," she reproached herself, but she experienced a sudden thrill for Linda's happiness.

In the meantime, Linda Phillips left the office building and approached a small, battered coupe parked at the curb. Smiling expectantly, she crossed the sidewalk to say:

"Going my way, mister?"

Kyle Norman nodded shortly, opening the car door to admit her. "You're a few minutes late tonight."

"Oh, I'm sorry, Kyle. Jane said she would finish my work so I could hurry.' She settled down beside him as the car pulled away from the curb and into the stream of home-moving traffic. An October haze had fallen over the small city of Prairievale, and smoke from the factories for which this middle-western village was famous, filled the air. Still the fall breeze was fresh in Linda's face after the stuffy, overheated office. She had opened the window, allowing the wind to caress her face and ruffle her shining, copper curls.

Watching the familiar scenery as Kyle drove toward her home, Linda murmured dreamily, "What a grand day this has been. The weather should be perfect for Sally's trip to Chicago."

It was said casually, but Kyle Norman scowled. To him this was no new subject.

"Are you going through that again?"

Linda smiled a trifle wistfully. "I'm afraid it's too late now for wistful thinking, but —" she paused, opening her purse to reveal a folded letter.

"I heard from Diane Frazier today. She invited Sally and me to stay with her."

"Diane Frazier?"

She once lived here," Linda explained. "Her parents were killed in an automobile accident when she was a child, and then she lived with an aunt in Prairievale until she was eighteen. She's been back a few times to visit Sally."

Sally Barnes was Linda's best friend.

Linda smiled faintly. "There's no use in writing. Diane knows better than to expect me."

"I should think so," Kyle said firmly. "Of course I realize you'd like to attend your cousin's wedding, but after all, you hardly know her. She would be almost like a stranger to you now."

"It wasn't so much the thought of attending Betty's wedding as it was the opportunity of going to Chicago for a week-end," Linda answered. "It meant a chance to get away for a little while. I'm so tired of working . . . working . . . working."

* * *

The man moved uneasily. Unconsciously they had reopened an old subject. Always before Linda had been sweet and trusting, eagerly adopting Kyle's plans and dreams for her own. But of late there had been a difference in her manner, as though she was tiring of her job, her home—even of Kyle, her fiance.

In order to put an end to the discussion once and for all, the man said slyly:

"Of course, if a week-end in Chicago means more to you than our wedding next June, I suppose it could be postponed again—"

"Of course not, darling," she murmured, moving closer to him, at her gentle acquiescence, the man's jaw relaxed. Unconsciously he had smiled a little.

The late afternoon sunshine caught the bright sparkle of her engagement ring, and Linda twisted it nervously.

"But just the same, I can't help feeling there's more to living than settling down in Prairievale. I want excitement and thrills. I want to meet brilliant people; attend operas; see first nights."

Kyle grinned, his good-humor completely restored. "I can't offer you any operas or first nights, but there's a new moving picture in town tonight. Will that do?"

There was a moment of silence; then Linda broke into laughter at this rude awakening from her dreams. "All right, Kyle," she grinned. "I guess, after all, this is my future, and my place is with you."

Arranging her hair before dinner, Linda stared soberly at her reflection in the mirror. As a child it had been her dream that some morning she would awaken—changed. Instead of plain Linda, she imagined, would be a new and exoctic woman-of-the-world; a glamorous, breath-taking personality who by a mere flicker of her lashes would capture the heart of every male in Prairievale.

Instead, Linda was a small, slim girl with wide amber eyes in a fragile heart-shaped face, and shining, copper-colored hair neatly arranged. The girl was not beautiful, but there was something haunting in her wistful face, and a definite charm in her manner. Staring at herself, Linda again experienced a familiar feeling that was like defeat. Again she thought, "Why am I so plain?"

Then Kyle appeared suddenly behind her, and Linda turned to smile at him, trustingly, not knowing how that smile transformed her face into beauty.

* * *

Dinner was a common-place meal with the Phillips family. There were no servants, no sparkling glassware and damask such as Linda longed to possess. Instead, in a small, cheerless dining-room, gathered John Phillips, middle-aged and graying, his equally fading wife, Mary, and their daughter. Here, too, sat Kyle Norman, intent upon his plate, and with his brown eyes inscrutable behind shining spectacles.

The conversation, which had been none too inspiring at the start, floundered and died. John Phillips, who for thirty years had been sole proprietor of an inconspicuous grocery store, racked his brain for a suitable topic, and then gave up the attempt.

It was then that Linda's mother brought forth the query which was to prove a veritable bombshell in the Phillips household.

"Did you have a very hard day, dear?"

"Not very," Linda glanced up. "Mr. Harcourt was a little on the crusty side."

This, too, was a familiar subject, and Kyle suddenly waved his fork in threatening fashion. "Harcourt again, huh?" he exploded. "Why don't you demand a little consideration from him?"

* * *

Linda's composure was unmoved. "After all, he is my boss," she said serenely. "And besides, I like him."

"Like him! That old goat?" Kyle snorted. "Just because he happens to be your boss is no reason for him to treat you like—an underling. That's what I told old man Kreamer today." Kyle was warming enthusiastically to his subject, unaware of sudden stillness around him; of watchful waiting.

"'Kreamer,' I said, 'just because I've been working as your clerk is no reason for you to take advantage of my services' . . ."

Slowly Kyle's voice died away as he became aware of Linda's eyes, fixed unblinking upon him. The silence in the little dining-room continued.

Linda's voice, when she broke the silence was icy:

"Kyle—did you . . . lose . . . your . . . job?"

"Now, Linda—" her father remonstrated, but the girl silenced him with a glance.

"Did you, Kyle?"

The man's face grew sullen, almost defiant. "We-ll, yes."

"Oh!" Linda drew in her breath sharply. "How could you do such a thing! How could you!"

"Please, dear," her mother whimpered nervously. She looked as though she would cry. John Phillips, tinkering futively with his napkin, cleared his throat.

"Perhaps you'd better excuse us, and settle this little quarrel privately."

"No!" Linda retorted stonily. "You both knew about this. Why didn't you tell me? How long has he been out of a job this time?"

"We—we were getting around to telling you," her father explained hopefully. "We didn't want to worry you."

"That isn't true," Linda replied quietly. "You were afraid to tell me. You knew how I would feel."

"After all, dear," Mary Phillips put in gently, "Kyle had to work very hard for Mr. Kreamer. You know he has a reputation for being a slave-driver with his employes."

"But—" Linda was white. "—the last time it was three months before he found work. He was lucky to get a position in the Kraemer hardware store. I doubt if Mr. Kreamer would have hired him, but times were hard and he was sorry for Kyle.

"It isn't just that I'm disappointed," Linda went on, gripping the table edge for support. "It's only that I'm making so many sacrifices. Why, I—I'm wearing the same winter coat I've worn three years because I've been saving for our wedding. I—I only turned down the chance to go to Betty's wedding because Kyle and I had so many uses for the money, and I wanted to go. I wanted very much to go—"

With tears streaming down her cheeks, Linda regarded her silent audience, and an exciting, daring plan began forming in her head. She made a sudden decision — a decision that was to alter the entire course of her life; to cause heartbreak and happiness, the thrill of success and the bitterness of defeat.

"Well, since it begins to look as though I'm the only one who wanted to get married," she said defiantly, "I'm going to have a honeymoon—a honeymoon all by myself. I'm going to Betty's wedding in Chicago, and — what's more—I'm going in style!"

* * *

The following day passed quickly— too quickly for Linda. Following her outburst at the dining table the previous evening, she had said nothing to her parents or to Kyle, but had gone to her room, composed, to make a list of the things she would need in Chicago.

Recklessly she had withdrawn from the bank a portion of the money placed in joint account with Kyle, and invested it in a neat, inexpensive outfit. There was a hat, plain and inconspicuous, and practical (how Linda had grown to despise that word); a dark dress for traveling; "So much more serviceable on the train, my dear," the clerk had said, and a simple, not unbecoming print frock for the wedding itself. This was Linda's new wardrobe.

All the arrangements had been made. Linda was to board the train at midnight, in company with pert, pretty Sally Barnes. Sally had long been a close friend of Linda's.

THERE IS NO SHORTAGE OF ELECTRICITY IN MANSFIELD

For Home, Store or Factory . . . . . But---

IF you are thinking of BUILDING, or BUYING a HOME..

. . . please take a minute to read this

RIGHT now a lot of folks are thinking about building or buying a home. Personally I think it's a grand idea . . . BUT —

You've probably read in your newspapers that there is a shortage of many essential war materials. Copper and steel are among the most important of these. The army, navy, and air corps require large quantities of both of these metals.

For that reason the government has told us that we cannot use copper or steel to extend our electric service lines unless we can show that the metals so used are for a line extension that is necessary to national defense. To quote from a recent Supply Priorities and Allocations Board release:

"All proposed (electric service line) extensions, whether by public or private power companies, and whether involving inventories on hand or materials to be acquired, must be submitted to OPM for approval, disapproval, or modification."

It is practically impossible to secure approval for a line extension for an individual private home. Therefore, if you are contemplating building, or buying a home, that is not located on one of our existing power lines, I urge you to contact the local office of The Ohio Public Service Company to find out whether or not, under existing governmental restrictions, we will be allowed to supply you with electric service. We want to make it possible for you to enjoy all the many benefits of electrical living. But we also wish to cooperate with our government in its national defense program and we must, therefore, abide by its rules and regulations regarding electric service line extensions.

So if you are thinking of building, or buying a home, I urge you to find out about your electric service before you take definite steps so there will be no difficulties in providing you with electric service at the time you are ready to move into your new home.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, January 7

MOST PROPITIOUS auguries are noted in this day's astral figure, with the prospect of fulfilled ambitions both in employment, business and in large or speculative enterprises. In this, superiors and employers should be found ready to lend hearty asistance. However, there are signs of extravagance, waste or loss by imposition, deception or concealed facts. But as the judgment is peculiarly astute and sagacious, this danger of loss may be sidestepped and surprising benefits may accrue.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of splendid opportunity for attaining cherished ambitions, in business, finance, speculation or through unusual channels in invention, scientific research, innovations or radical departures from the orthodox and customary. However, there is need to be particularly alert to deception, concealed or misstated facts, misplaced confidences, as well as personal extravagances wastefulness and excesses. Employers and those in high places should be found cooperative in putting over ambitious programs.

GALION SCHOOL BOARD EMPLOYS CLERK AT MEET

Isabel Monroe Appointed at Salary of $120 a Year.

GALION—Breaking a precedent by not electing one of its own members, the Galion Board of Education at its first meeting of the new year last night named Isabel Monroe as clerk of the board at a salary of $120 a year, and secretary to the superintendent at $1,080, combining the two positions.

Miss Monroe who has been secretary to the superintendent since 1939, under civil service, was elected as clerk of the board for one year under $1500 bond.

Recommendation of employing a non-member of the board as clerk was made by W. A. Corbet of Marion, state examiner. Miss Monroe will have her office in the superintendent's office where she is now employed as secretary to Supt. M. A. Povenmire.

After the old board finished its business, Louise John, presiding in the absence of Dr. P. A. Murr, election of Dr. C. A. Adams to the presidency, and Miss John, vice president, was made. Considerable discussion of the position of clerk was held before a decision was made.

Dr. Adams made the following appointments: Earl Logan to serve on the high school athletic board; Dr. B. P. Mansfield, Miss John and Mrs. C. B. Monroe to comprise the finance committee. The building sponsors, named by Dr. Adams, are: South, Mrs. Monroe; Junior High school, Miss John; East school, Dr. Mansfield; North building, Earl Logan. Miss John was chosen to act as representative of the board to the teachers, and Dr. Mansfield was named park adviser.

The board's two new members are Mrs. C. B. Monroe and Earl Logan. They succeed Dr. P. A. Murr who was the out-going president, and Harry Sanderlin, who has served as clerk. In addition to Mrs. Monroe and Logan, the board is comprised of Louise John, Dr. B. P. Mansfield and Dr. C. A. Adams.

Adoption of a tentative budget, approved by the board, calls for a grand total of expenditures of $152,617. Of this amount $121,475 is for the general fund; $23,500 is for indebtedness, and $7,642 is for interest, making a total debt fund of $31,142.

The board also decided to change its windstorm insurance, now provided by separate windstorm policies, to a comprehensive coverage to be attached to the fire policy, for an additional premium of $19.26 on the present premium of $482.32. This plan was adopted after the board heard Mr. Ocasuk of Columbus, who represented the Galion Insurers Association, providing distribution of dividends between all members of the association.

It was also explained by Supt. Povenmire that an application for surplus commodities for hot lunches to be served at the West school has been made. This would be handled through W. P. A. cooks and supervision, and would primarily benefit the Polk township children.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I had pierced Noel's defenses at last. I saw that, as his head lifted abruptly and the expression of his eyes changed from hostile skeptism to quick concern. But his anger against Stephen Redfield still lingered in his eyes and sounded in his voice, as he broke his silence and repeated my words.

"Your father thinks Redfield knows where Marion is being hidden? Then what are we waiting for? If he'll only turn me loose against that cur, I'll choke what he knows out of him, or put him where he'll never know another thing in this world."

I put up my hand with an imperative protesting gesture against the torrent of words, and Noel, pater ly remembering his promise, flushed in embarrassed fashion and slumped back into his chair again.

"Sorry!" he said. "But the thought of Marion, so dear to all of us, being in the power of a beast like that—"

His voice trailed off chokingly, and I spoke with quick reassurance.

"My father does not mean that Marion is in Redfield's power, Noel," I said, "and you inadvertently have exaggerated what I just said. My father thinks Redfield may know where Mary is hidden. He is not even positive on that point. But he has certain corroborative proof that Redfield is linked in some way to the gang which has Marion in its power."

I stopped, wondering how much I should confide to the emotionally overwrought young man facing me. Then, knowing his discretion to be as cool as his temper is inflammable, I put that particular card on the table.

Marion's Phone Call.

"Has Mary told you of Marion's telephone call to me?" I asked.

"She has told me nothing" he answered. "She has had no opportunity, even if she had the inclination. I know only what you have told me yourself."

I ignored the bitter note in his rejoinder, and went on with the proof linking Redfield, in some yet undiscovered manner, with Marion's abductors.

"Within an hour after I had heard of Marion's disappearance from college," I began, "she telephoned me from Mrs. Ticer's, sending her mother assurance of her safety and asking me if I know the whereabouts of Jack Bickett."

"He's Aunt Katherine's husband, isn't he?" Noel asked quickly, plainly intrigued by my tale. "But what in the world—"

"That's the question we're all asking," I said. "Mrs. Ticer told us later that Marion was accompanied by a young man of whom she seemed to be afraid, and who hurried her away before her uncle Dicky, who had checked on the telephone call, could overtake her.

"When Stephen Redfield came to see me last night," I went on, "he asked me the same question, about Jack Bickett's whereabouts. When I questioned him concerning the reason for his interest, since Jack hasn't been in this country for years and no one of his relatives or friends has heard from him for an alarmingly long time, he told me a most evasive and unconvincing yarn.

"This co-incidence, if you may call it that," I said, "is one of the reasons why my father thinks Redfield is linked to Marion's captors. He believes that for some reason Jack Bickett has become important to the conspirators, and that they are holding Marion-hostage until they get the information they wish concerning him. But Marion's code letter reveals that they intend to kill her, once the information is in their hands."

His face was ashen now with bewildered horror.

"Mary—has—heard — from — Marion," he said. "How? Where?"

"I forgot you did not know, Noel," I said, and forthwith went over the tale of Marion's letters to Ronald and to her mother, which she had been forced to write but had couched in the childhood code Mary had devised for her long ago, and because of which her cleverly camouflaged references to Mary had finally brought the letters to the only eyes which could interpret them.

I did not tell him of the queer cryptogram in Jack Bickett's hand which Mary had secreted, among other things, when Stephen Redfield's papers were scattered by a breeze coming through the restaurant window. Mary herself did not know the importance of that paper. But I did tell him of the many important things his young wife had discovered about Redfield, and stressed the high value my father placed on the information she had gained.

"My father believes that Mary stands the best chance of anyone, anywhere, to gain knowledge of Marion from Redfield," I finished. "When I tell you that if Mary were his own daughter he would ask this service of her, can't you understand why he expects your approval of this endeavor to save Marion's life?"

Sport Podge by REX HESS

"If," says Jake Wagenhals, "you do not find another word for basketball besides 'bucketball.' I am going to have to find another sport writer to read."

"Now, Jake," I told him, "you know very well that they took down those old peach baskets long ago, so it isn't, properly, 'basketball' any more."

* * *

Yes, the game is full of misnomers. And it isn't altogether proper to call it a "cage" game any more. That came not so long after the peach baskets, when the game was played in a cage with no out-of-bounds, and when men were men and cracked skulls and busted ribs weren't a bit uncommon.

And then there's that part of the court called the key-hole. There's no key for it, and you can't open it, and even that super-snooper Winchell couldn't see through it.

* * *

The basket's gone, the bucket was never there, all that remains is the hoop. So what shall we call it when we take a shot? Hoops, my dear. (I'll take water with mine.)

* * *

Basketball, bucketball, hoopball. This gets worse as it goes along. When they get down to ringball I quit.

Fortunately our Tygers have very little use for the bank board. They take their shots straight—for the hoop. Otherwise we'd have to call it bank night when they won. And that's getting too far-fetched for even my jitterbrain to enjoy.

* * *

These high school boys do take a lot of shots. Some like long shots and some like short shots, and very few turn down a shot when it comes their way. What am I talking about? Oh, yes, basketball shots.

Last Friday night, for instance, our Tygers took 48 shots, and 15 of them were good. Akron West, on the other hand, tried to down 56 shots, but succeeded on only seven. Had to take 'em in a hurry, no doubt, and most of 'em went down the wrong way.

* * *

A tisket, a tasket,
A bucket or a basket,
Let off all the steam you want,
But please don't blow a gasket.
Heigh-de-heigh, Ho-de-ho,
If you know a place to go,
Some hoop-la we will throw,
Yes, yes.

Pro Stars Play Here Tonight

Chuckovits Club Meets National Champions.

ONE of the largest basketball crowds that has attended a game in Mansfield in recent years is forecast for tonight in Mansfield High School gym when the World Champion Detroit Eagles battle the Toledo Jim Whites.

The crowd is likely to witness a cage classic that for sheer brilliance may surpass anything ever staged here. The main event, featuring the greatest "Play for Pay" stars of the nation, is slated to start at 9 o'clock, preceded by an inviting preliminary at 8 o'clock between the Westinghouse quintets of Lima and Mansfield.

* * *

Never have so many national celebrities graced the Mansfield High School court as will romp there tonight. Each club offers an official All-American pro. Bud Jeannette, of the Eagles, rates that title, along with Chuck Chuckovits of Toledo, who gained greater glory by being named the No. 1 All-American Pro."

* * *

Both Chuckovits and Jeannette will be surrounded by all star casts, something new for the Chucker who formerly played with hometown boys. It will be interesting to see how Chuckovits looks when working with established stars.

The Eagle line-up includes Jake Ahearn of Brooklyn St. Johns, Paul Widowicz and Lou Kasperik of Duquesne's Iron Dukes, George McClusky and Ed Perry of Michigan State, Dutch Dehnert, former New York Celtic star and inventor of the pivot play, coaches the Eagles.

* * *

The Toledo roster lists Wilton "Scoop" Putnam, U. of Tennessee All American, George Nelmark, the flashy dribbler from Missouri State Teachers college, Eddie Erban of Marquette U., Win Pederson, famous Minnesota university All-American, Coach Tommy Edwards of Ohio U., and others.

* * *

Gates open at 6:30 with officials of the City Basketball league, which is sponsoring the program, in charge.

The line-up:

Toledo	Pos.	Detroit
Chuckovits	F	Widowicz
Putnam	F	Kasperik

James Haspeslagh, team instructor, said that 10 boys would be necessary to take part on the team each shooting period.

HOCKEY FANS CAN'T KEEP PUCKS: RUBBER SHORTAGE

NEW YORK—(AP)—War conditions are changing the habits of hockey fans.

Before the Brooklyn Americans took the ice for their first win over Boston since 1940, the spectators were asked to return rubber discs that might sail into the crowd. When the first puck disappeared into an overcoat pocket a concerted "boo" brought about its hasty reappearance.

Bashful Captain Takes Bow

BILL DOOLITTLE

Completely floored by the surprise announcement that he had been elected captain of the 1941 undefeated Mansfield high school football team, Bill Doolittle, called on for a speech at last night's News-Journal grid banquet, could find only this to say: "Oh, my God. Thanks fellas." Here he is, leaving the speaker's table, but in a hurry.

Defense Used as Offense May Be New Basketball

By CLAIR BEE
Long Island University Coach

NEW YORK—(AP)—In the Rhode Island State gymnasium at Kingston the basketball scoreboard is rigged up to take care of scoring totals which run into three figures.

That isn't just wishful thinking. They often use all three figures when Coach Frank Keaney's outfit is moving in high gear. Playing Connecticut two years ago—both teams were undefeated prior to this game—Rhode Island scored 64 points in the first half!

The final score was 102 to 81!

* * *

The Rhode Islanders don't do it with mirrors. Unbelievably they do it with a defense! They call it a "pressing defense." And believe me, brother, it's pressing.

* * *

The Phillips 66 Oilers from Oklahoma showed it the first time I saw it—against an All-Metropolitan team under my direction in Madison Square Garden in 1936. It all but drove the players crazy—and me with them.

This system is just what it implies—a pressing defense that begins the second the opposing team gets the ball and continues at points on the floor until the opponents are forced into an error or a held ball. Then, the minute the pressing defense gets its hands on the ball it's bang-bang for the basket from any point on the floor.

* * *

Rhode Island State, for instance, used the 260-pound son of Coach Keaney to retrieve from the backboard. When he came down with the ball he swished it — almost without looking—at a spot near the far basket and one of his teammates usually hit that spot about the same time as the ball.

* * *

"Shoot at the slightest opportunity" is about the only idea behind what little offense there is under this system.

The pressing defense takes stamina to the nth degree. It takes clever defense men, opportunists, players strong enough to constantly harass the opposition no matter where the ball may be. The theory is to keep the other team off balance. Players must be coached not to try to steal the ball. That leads to personal fouls. Rather they must force the loss of the ball by error or by a held ball.

This may develop into the "new basketball." Certainly it has crowd appeal—but it takes unusual material and plenty of it!

Newman Pushed From 1st Rank

Hedges edged Newman school from the first rank in Grammer school cage play yesterday with an 18-12 score on the John Simpson junior high school court.

With Newman out of first place only Woodland, Bowman and Hedges remained in the front rank. Woodland scalped Bushnell, 18-8, and Bowman downed Carpenter, 8-4, to maintain their places.

In other games Western tripped Brinkerhoff, 6-4, and Prospect murdered West Fifth, 13-1.

NEW YORK COACH WON'T ALTER TEAM CAGE STYLE

NEW YORK—(AP)—Nat Holman, basketball coach at City college, isn't going to change his coaching system just because western teams romped over metropolitan fives in holiday doubleheaders at Madison Square Garden.

"Their one-handed shooting and galloping up and down the floor sure got results," said Holman, whose team lost to Wyoming, "but until New York high school coaches change their styles of teaching I'm going to insist that my boys use two hands. It's too late to make the change after they are in college."

Baer Thinks He'll Win

Unafraid, He Faces Louis' Lethal Boxing Gloves.

By SID FEDER

LAKEWOOD, N. J.—(AP)—Jacob (Buddy) Baer is a simple soul with a simple philosophy.

So when he sits down for a chat and tells you, matter of factly, that he can't see what he has to worry about from Joe Louis, you have to come pretty close to believing him.

* * *

He tells you this, mind you, in a tone about as worked up and tense as a fellow asking "please put a head on my beer." The big guy is no more scared than a Wake Island Marine.

* * *

This is definitely not a fighter giving his courage a shot in the arm with big talk. It's not brother Maxie Baer, loud-talking for weeks before his big flop-eroo with Louis and then resting on one knee shaking his head as the referee asked him to get up. If Buddy is afraid of what might happen in Madison Square Garden Friday night, then he ought to have Barrymore's profile-because he's every bit the actor.

* * *

"Look," he explained today as he started tapering off for his second crack at the heavyweight title, "I took Joe's Sunday shots last May and I'm still alive. Right? Well, knowing that, all I have to do is go in along with him. Only if it's there and toss punches, or if Joe tries to make a boxing match out of it, I'll dance right along with him. Only if it's that kind of a thing, it's going to be a real stinkeroo."

* * *

One way or the other, there's going to be quite a gathering of folks giving it the double-o. Promoter Mike Jacobs wouldn't be at all surprised if the Garden bulges its walls housing some 20,000 customers for this tea-party. Right now, he's shooting at a gate or more than $200,000.

Of this, the Navy 'Relief fund will be the big winner. Mike and Joe are giving their shares, and Buddy, who figures to need a little ready cash for arnica and assorted liniments after it's over, is turning in a good chunk of his cut.

No one except a fellow named Buddy Baer is giving Buddy Baer much of a chance of making the Bomber's 20th title defense his last.

MIAMI BEATEN

MADISON, Ind.—(AP)—Hanover college knocked off Miami university's basketball team from Oxford, 46 to 38, last night. The local squad overcame an early 15 to 24 lead of the visitors and was in front, 29 to 20, at the half.

Grid Banquet Called Best In 7-Year History Of Event

Paul Brown of Ohio State, but there were surprises on the program which came close to stealing the show.

Chief among these surprises were the awards made by the Downtown Coaches association, through Head Coach Ned Brooks, to the Tyger lettermen, Coach Paul Snyder, and the team's greatest booster, Dr. W. E. Wygant.

Departing from its usual custom of making an award to the outstanding player, the Downtown Coaches association gave each letterman a gold football in memory of the undefeated season, with watch chains donated by Sam Fox, first assistant coach of the Downtown Coaches.

To Coach Snyder went a beautiful plaque bearing a picture of the team, the scores of the season's games, and the names of the coaching staff.

Dr. Wygant, who had charge of arrangements for the special train to Massillon last fall, and who was one of the most active members of the Downtown Coaches throughout the season, also received a championship gold football and chain.

Another surprise was the announcement by Coach Snyder of the election of Bill Doolittle as honorary captain of the 1941 Tygers.

Doolittle was completely floored. Called on for a speech, Bill grabbed the microphone, put it back, turned around and faced the crowd, and said:

"Oh, my God. Thanks fellas."

* * *

* * *

Coach Brown urged these boys to continue their education right up until the day they may be called for war duty. "This country needs educated men," the Buckeye mentor declared.

"Don't take the attitude that you may get called for the army anyhow, so that there's no use in going to school, and that you'll come back and go to college after the war is over," he said. "There's no use kidding yourselves. If you don't start in college now, the chances are that you won't go to college later.

"Continue your education right up to the day you may be called into the war, and then jump into the war with both feet. I don't know how you're going to college, but you can go if you want to. You can go to Kent State or any of the state institutions by working in the summer to pay your tuition, and working at school to pay for your room and board. I know you can do it. I did it."

* * *

Coach Brown departed from his usual after-dinner talk to inject a bit of humor, a large part of it directed in the direction of guest Johnny Hallabrin, former Mansfield high star and quarterback last fall of Brown's Buckeyes.

* * *

But during the showing of the Ohio State-Michigan football pictures Brown pointed out one case where the Buckeyes tried to run the ball on fourth down, failed to make the distance, and the mistake proved costly.

"That was my idea," Brown said. "You can't blame John for that."

Brown acted as commentator for the Buckeye-Wolverine film, and Coach Bud Houghton of Massillon high school did the same for the Mansfield-Massillon movies.

* * *

"That was the hardest physical game we had to play all season," declared Houghton. "Both teams were hitting hard and hitting for keeps. We made a lot of yards between the two 20-yard marks, but after that the yardage was tough to get."

* * *

Brief talks were given by Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton, Coach Houghton, School Superintendent W. L. Miller, Harold Arlin, president of the board of education, Coach Snyder, Athletic Director Harry Mehock, Hallabrin, Ned Brooks, Dr. Wygant, Principal Glenn Rohleder, and the News-Journal sports editor.

And bows were taken by Luther Emory, football writer of the Massillon Independent, Vern Hoffman and Vere Smith of the high school coaching staff, Charles Fall, coach of Johnny Appleseed Junior high school, Al Fendrick, coach of Madison high school, R. D. Lindsay, managing editor of the News-Journal, and Mike Zivkoff and Roland Schmidt, co-captains of the John Simpson team.

And through it all, moving the program along, was the entertaining banter of Toastmaster Gil Baird, who probably talked himself into a permanent job as ringmaster of News-Journal grid banquets.

In spirit at the banquet, though not in person, were two former Mansfielders, Russ Murphy, assistant coach at Cornell university, and Joe Blahnik of New Philadelphia, former head coach of the Downtown Coaches. Their telegram of congratulations to the Tygers were read.

Purdue, Iowa Top Big 10 Cage Loop

CHICAGO—(AP)—Purdue and Iowa are profiting happily on the bad basketball luck of Chicago and Michigan, to such an extent that the Hawkeyes and Boilermakers currently are sharing first place honors with Northwestern in the Big Ten race.

* * *

The Wolverines have dropped five consecutive games, the last two to Iowa and Purdue. The Maroons have been beaten six straight, the last times by Purdue and Iowa. Consequently Iowa and Purdue, having won two games apiece and lost none in conference play, find themselves in a category contested only by Northwestern, victor in two out of two, and Illinois, winner of its lone league start.

* * *

Iowa subdued the Chicago Maroons, 53-39, last night. Purdue conquered Michigan 36-18 and Northwestern's Wildcats handed handed Minnesota its first setback in seven games this season, 49-38.

The Hoosiers, meanwhile rebounding from their 50-40 loss to N. U. Saturday, clipped Wisconsin last night, 38-34, to hand the 1941 Big Ten and national collegiate champs their second straight conference trimming and their third in a row in all games.

500 RICHLAND FARMERS GIVEN $10,688 BY AAA

Get Payments For Compliance With 1941 Federal Farm Program Here.

Approximately 500 Richland county farmers had received $10,688 today as the county AAA office distributed the first allotment of checks for compliance with the 1941 federal farm program.

Nearly 1,800 county farmers are eligible to receive government checks which are expected to total more than $100,000.

County Triple A officials said the first checks arrived later than usual this year, but all of them will reach county farmers sooner than in past years because three payments have been combined in a single check this time.

Formerly, county farmers who complied with the federal crop program received two or three checks over a period of several weeks during the fall and winter.

The checks include parity payments and allotments for soil conservation and soil building practices.

The county AAA office yesterday sent 500 more applications for payments to the state AAA headquarters, and another allotment of checks is expected to arrive in about three weeks, members of the county committee said.

The county office checks farms for compliance with the crop program and submits figures to the state office which then sends applications back to be signed by the participating farmers before the final payment is approved.

Five states are planning to eliminate the need for new automobile license plates next year or in the future.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

OUTWIT THE ENEMY

TO OUTWIT the enemy, you must be keen in figuring out what he is trying to do to you. That is one side of it. The other is to keep him from getting hep to what you are cooking up for him. Those principles of successful warfare apply just as much to the mimic battlefield of the cards as they do to the operations of combat troops, ships and planes. Part of your plans is based on something you are trying to do, and another part on thwarting the foe in what he is trying to do.

Playing in the West position on this deal, in the national championships of the American Contract Bridge league at Richmond, Va., was Morgan Howard, new president of the organization. Formerly of New York and Pittsburgh, and now of Los Angeles, he not only is assistant treasurer of the Hearst-Cosmopolitan Newspapers, but like his old partner, J. D. Gortatowski, general manager of the same organization, a smashing keen bridge player.

After leading his club 3 to the A, he had nothing of importance to do until the one crucial spot of the entire hand, when he arose to the occasion perfectly and did the only right thing, preventing the declarer from getting a trick for which he was conniving. After the first trick, the declarer took two hearts, the club K, the heart K and three more clubs. The diamond 2 was thrown by Mr. Howard on the third heart and the spade J on the fifth club.

Next came the diamond K, then the 5 to the A. On that Mr. Howard threw his diamond Q. Had he not done so, he would have had to win the diamond 10 and lead a spade, making South's K good. Instead, his exit play with the Q enabled East to win the diamond 10 with the J, then cash the diamond 7 and heart 7, holding the declarer to ten tricks instead of the 11 that otherwise would have been taken.

What would you do on your first turn with the West hand of this deal, and why?

THEATERS

Comanche Survived.

Comanche, the mount of Gen. George A. Custer in the battle of Little Big Horn, was the only survivor of the Seventh United States cavalry, according to records that came to light during the filming of "They Died With Their Boots On," the screen spectacle based on the career of Custer, now showing at the Ohio. After the battle Comanche became a highly privileged horse with his own orderlies and a special stall at Fort Bliss. The mount is portrayed by an equine actor in the picture and given a prominence that might otherwise not have been accorded had not Comanche been the sole cavalry survivor.

* * *

Shudder Movie.

"Among the Living," a new shudder movie, with Albert Dekker in a dual role, opens Wednesday at the Madison. Dekker, who has played hated men almost since his advent in pictures, gets an opportunity to be liked in one of his two roles in the current attraction. He plays a friendly industrialist as well as the part of the latter's homicidal brother. There's no trapdoors, grasping hands or ghosts in the picture as the whole thing is done starkly with the audience in on events every second. Susan Hayward, Harry Carey and Frances Farmer are cast. Hugh Herbert's comedy, "Don't Get Personal," is the co-attraction.

* * *

Newspaper Yarn.

"Public Enemies," a newspaper yarn climaxed with an expose of master-minds smuggling aliens into the United States, opens Wednesday at the Park. Phillip Terry plays the young New York newspaperman who is handed the story after a wealthy young woman, allergic to newspaper reporters, decides to make amends for losing the reporter his job. Wendy Barrie plays the girl. Nana Bryant and William Frawley are in the cast. "Cracked Nuts," the second picture, deals with a smalltown girl who goes to the city and the boy who follows her there. Astrid Allwyn, Stuart Erwin and Una Merkel are cast.

* * *

Aerial Thriller.

"Dive Bomber," the aerial thriller in technicolor, opening Tuesday at the Majestic deals with the men who fly for science and not glory. Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray are co-starred with Flynn enacting a medico attempting to solve the mysteries of what happens to men in the stratosphere so that measures might be taken to prevent high altitude sickness and "black outs." Alexis Smith furnishes the romantic interest as a charmer sought-after by both Flynn and MacMurray. "Highway West," with Brenda Marshall and Olympe Branda is the second picture.

* * *

Nautical Musical.

"Navy Blues," with Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye and Jack Haley is the attraction at the Ritz. Spencer Tracy is starred in the co-attraction, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Extends Hours To Issue Licenses to Owners of Dogs

The county auditor's office will remain open the next two Saturdays until 4 p. m. for the convenience of dog tag purchasers who have no opportunity to visit the office during the week, Auditor Norman L. Wolfe said today.

With the Jan. 20 deadline for the old tags two weeks away, only 1,000 tags, or about one-sixth of the total, have been sold, Wolfe said.

Dogs must have 1942 tags by Jan. 20 or the animals may be picked up by the dog warden, the auditor said. Tags for females dogs are $3 and licenses for male dogs and sterilized females are $1 each.

Tags may be ordered by mail if the dog owner sends a complete description of the animal with the required amount of money to the county auditor's office.

STOCK MARKET CONTINUES TO DISPLAY GAINS

Westinghouse In Group of Select Issues Showing Climbing Ability.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Selective gains were spread over today's stock market although many leaders continued to lack much support.

Plus marks were pinned on American Telephone, Electric Auto-Lite, Texas Co., Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Goodyear, Goodrich, American Smelting, Westinghouse, American Can, Allied Chemical and Consolidated Edison.

Backward at times were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, General Electric and Sears Roebuck.

Market students saw further evidence of increasing industrial momentum in the American Telephone statement disclosing a net upturn of about 1,361,000 telephones in service in the Bell system during 1941. It was the widest jump on record and put total stations at around 18,840,000, also a new peak.

GERMAN SIEGE LINES BROKEN AT SEVASTOPOL

Nazis Admit Russian Troops Crack Their Main Line Before Moscow.

Russian troops which landed at Feodosiya, in the eastern Crimea, had reached the Sea of Azov, cutting off the entire Kerch peninsula.

Izvestia's correspondent said the Germans tried to shift part of their Sevastopol forces to stem the Russian onslaught on the Kerch peninsula, only to meet a deadly hail of shells from Soviet warships and coastal artillery and bombs from Russian naval aircraft.

On the central front, the lengthening arm of the Soviet counter-offensive was reported sweeping the Germans back upon Kursk, 280 miles below Moscow and about 100 miles south of Orel.

Soviet dispatches said that Red army troops who routed the Germans from Tim, 40 miles east of Kursk, were advancing rapidly.

"The Germans did everything to retain this line," the Russians said. "A unit commanded by Dobrovolsky outflanked the Fascists and penetrated their rear."

On the Leningrad front, the Russians painted an equally brightening picture, declaring that Red army troops backed by American-made fighter planes had recaptured 300 square miles of territory and 30 villages in five days after crushing a German offensive.

The Berlin radio, admitting that the Russians had cracked the main German line on the central (Moscow) front, said heavy losses had been inflicted on the Soviet forces and that German troops had recaptured the lost ground.

Russian troops were reported exerting fierce pressure on the German stronghold at Mozhaisk, striking from a 160-mile encirclement arc with spearheads at Staritsa, on the upper Volga 125 miles northwest of Moscow, and Kozelsk, 140 miles to the southwest.

On the North African front, slashing rainstorms slowed operations, but British Middle East headquarters reported that British imperial troops were "successfully active" in attacking German-Italian forces around Agedabia, 90 miles south of Bengasi.

Undisclosed numbers of Axis prisoners continued to flow back to prison camps in Egypt as British forces mopped up isolated German and Italian centers of resistance around Salum, on the Egyptian-Libyan frontier.

Premier Mussolini's high command said violent artillery duels raged all day yesterday in the Salum area as well as the Agedabia sector, 300 miles to the west, and reported that Axis planes hammered British troop concentrations.

Dr. Otto Dietrich, Nazi press chief, told Germans meanwhile in an article published in all German newspapers that Hitler had remained steadily at his headquarters in eastern Europe since the Russian war started June 22, without leaving for more than one-day trips.

German authorities in Paris reported two more bombings there in addition to that which caused the fixing of a partial 5 p. m. curfew during the week-end. One of the explosions happened in a German bookshop in the Champs Elysees district and the other in a German soldiers' club, the authorities said.

Free French in the recently seized French colony of St. Pierre-et-Miquelon announced they had no intention of evacuating the islands they seized a week ago, to the embarrassment of the United States state department, which said an agreement neutralizing French Atlantic possessions was violated.

Seizure by the United States of the Panamanian vessel Marconi, at first believed Itali, appeared cleared up with an announcement that Panama Canal Zone judicial authorities had dropped action to declare her a prize of war.

War Keeps Hitler At Russian Front

BERLIN — (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Gigantic war tasks have kept Adolf Hitler steadily at his headquarters in eastern Europe except for occasional one-day trips since the German-Russian campaign started June 22. Dr. Otto Dietrich said today in urging upon Germany "complete trust in victory."

The Nazi press chief declared in an article published in all German newspapers that "for six months, that is, since the beginning of the eastern campaign, the fuehrer has been staying in his headquarters in eastern Europe, devoting his life entirely to solution of gigantic tasks confronting the German nation in connection with necessities of the war."

(British dispatches Jan. 1 said that Hitler, who supplanted Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch as the German commander in chief Dec. 19 in response to "an inner call," had flown to Smolensk from Kiev in an attempt to stiffen his central lines.

(About a half dozen German generals were reported in London yesterday to have gone the way of von Brauchitsch for military reverses or criticism of the conduct of the war.)

RAF Raids German Sub Base in Greece

CAIRO, Egypt—(AP)—An RAF raid on the German submarine base at Salamis, Greek port west of Athens, was reported by the RAF Middle East command today for the second successive day.

The Greek peninsula is directly across a narrow neck of the Mediterranean from the hump of Libya and, therefore, in a strategic position for German U-boats menacing British ships supplying the armies pushing westward in north Africa.

Fascists Alarmed By Trouble at Home

LONDON — (INS) — Reuters (British) news agency today quoted a Tass (Russian) report from Istanbul which said Italian Fascist party chiefs are "deeply alarmed over the growth of anti-Fascist sentiments in Italy."

According to this report black shirts and the Fascist militia have been instructed to intensify their reprisals against "discontented elements."

Party leaders were declared to be demanding that Premier Mussolini transfer further Italian units from the Balkans to Italy to cope with the possibility of "internal complications."

Brent And 'Oomph Girl' Wed

PALM BEACH, Fla.— Ann Sheridan, the movies' red-haired "oomph girl," and Actor George Brent, who, as late as Saturday, said she was just a "good friend," were married here last night by Judge Richard P. Robbins. The wedding was expected, but unheralded. The principals arrived by plane yesterday from Hollywood, and the ceremony was held at the home of Mrs. Sam H. Harris, widow of the Broadway producer.

Miss Sheridan was married once before, in the days before her "oomph" had been recognized by the motion pictures. Brent, 38, a native of Ireland, and an American citizen since 1937, was married twice previously. His first wife was actress Ruth Chatterton. Later, he and Australian actress Constance Worth were secretly married at Ensenada, but he had it annuled.
